that could be expected of them under the circumstances.

Despite the "congestion and confusion, which naturally followed the country's entrance into the war," Williard said the railroads showed an effective capacity for co-operation under the railroad war board in 1817, handling a volume of traffic 127 highlion ton miles greater than that handled two years before.

senate interstate commerce committee today to refute the recent testinony of W. G. McAdoo, former director general of railroads to the effect that the roads had broken down before being placed under government control.

Regulation Was Cause.

Mr. Willard appeared at a resumption of the committee investigation into the railroad situation. He declared the "scrious situation" which developed under the war load in 1917 might rather be attributed to a "failure. If not a breakdown of our system of railroad regulation as then in effect."

Rapidly mounting operating expenses under his direction in 1917. Were proving a scrious financial problem for many of the roads, he said, because under the law they were unable to advance their rates without permission from the interstate commerce commission.

The commission, he asserted did not seem willing, (perhaps did not feel antihorized under the law) to "deal with the matter with such promptness and liberality as the situation, in my opinion, demanded."

"Former Director General McAdoo"

But Chicago Police Resieve to get the Altho fifty suspects are in custody and will be held for questioning, the police do not believe teday that the bandits who shot and killed Philip J. Summers, and Ernest Cassidy, a policeman, during a robbery late yesterday, have been apprehended. Squage of detectives are shift seeking the bandits lair. Summers, who was treasurer of a building and loan association, and Cassidy were en route to a bank with $5,000 representing the collections of the company, when two men leaped from a decreasy and began shooting before Summers and Cassidy fell first and Summers ran but was shot down to be a summer and Cassidy could elevate their hands. Cassidy fell first and Summers ran but was shot down to be a summer and cassidy of detectives are still seeking the bandits lair.

"Former Director General McAdoo has pointed with pride, and justifiably so," Mr. Willard continued. "to the record of accomplishments of the railroads under his direction during 1921, but the figures show that the same railroad that moved 430 billion ton miles in 1317, moved only 440 billion ton miles in 1318, or about 2 per cent more."

Not Because of Failure.

Quoting from President Wilson's address to congress in January, 1918, in which he stated that the taking over of the roads was "not because of any dereliction or failure on their part but only because there are some things which the government can do, and privie management cannot." Mr. Willard declared the former president clearly showed thereby that he did not feet the roads "had failed to do all that could be expected of them under the circumstances."
